Let's Start!

Ouch!

Learning Outcome

Describe complicated or unusual events in the past through a wider range of B1 language in both work and social contexts.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about injuries and accidents.
- I can make suggestions and offers of help.
- I can discuss how to deal with problems.

Ask your partner:

- When was the last time you cut yourself?
- What were you doing?
- How serious was it?

Let's Explore!

Vanessa should hire Sally to do some PR!

* "PR" means public relations. This person helps get the person or product known in a positive way.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Sally: This is so nice of you to show me how to cook that simple spicy rice dish.
Vanessa: I want to keep that one in mind for a bit.
Sally: You should make up a little recipe booklet for the restaurant.
Vanessa: They could be put out to sell at our next Spicy Rice Night!
Sally: You should give me a couple to take to the office.
Vanessa: They could be sent as a thank you to Ms. Ryan.
Sally: I can pass them along.
Vanessa: That was brilliant of you Sally explaining to Ms. Ryan how everything could be fixed! That was really quick thinking on your part. It helped make the evening even more profitable! I even got a standing reservation from one of her crew.
- Sally: You should hire me to do some PR.
Vanessa: Okay stop gesturing with the knife. I don't want to be stabbed!
Sally: Sorry. I can't be trusted sometimes!
Vanessa: Cut the onions while I start the rice.
Sally: Ow!
Vanessa: What happened?
Sally: I dropped this huge onion on my toe. It's throbbing!
Vanessa: Be more careful especially when we start cooking. You don't want to burn or scald yourself. By the way, you should cut away from yourself. You don't want to cut your fingers.
Sally: I find that hard. Hey, why is the onion all red?
Vanessa: Ummm. You're bleeding.

Modals for Suggestions and Offers

You can use modals like could and can to make offers or to give suggestions.

You could ... shows that the suggestion or offer is an option.

- You could walk instead of drive.
- We could stay at home and watch something on TV.

You should ... shows that you are making a strong suggestion, or giving advice.

- You should catch up on that work you missed first.
- You should take a day off and rest.
- You should take the English course with me this term.

Sentence	Meaning
You could make up little recipe booklets for the restaurant.	It's a good option.
I can pass them along.	It's an option.
You should give me a couple to take to the office.	It's a strong suggestion.
You should hire me to do some PR.	It's a strong suggestion.
By the way, you should cut away from yourself.	It's a strong suggestion.

Modal Verbs in the Passive Voice

You use modal verbs to add meaning to other verbs. They come before the dictionary form (Infinitive without 'to') of the main verb. Modal verbs can add the meaning of certainty or obligation.

You can use modal verbs in the passive voice.

You use the passive voice when you want to focus on the receiver of the action, rather than the 'doer' of the action.

Here is the structure of a passive sentence:

Subject + to be + past participle

For example:

The booklets are sent as a thank you to Ms. Ryan.

You can add a modal verb before the to be:

Subject + modal + to be + past participle

For example:

The booklets could be sent as a thank you to Ms. Ryan.

Here the sentence now has an additional meaning of possibility, thanks to the modal could.

Examples:

- They could be put out to sell at our next Spicy Rice Night!
- You can't be trusted with knives!
- That was brilliant of you explaining how everything could be fixed!
- Accidents can be prevented when you pay attention to what you're doing.
